

SILVERTON

Silverton started as a mining settlement in the 1890s and became a thriving mining town. When the boom ended, Silverton's population shrank - and currently stands at 195, earning it the title of BC's second smallest municipality. In this charming lakeside village, you'll find heritage buildings, the Outdoor Mining Museum, a campground, a boat launch, a day park for picnicking, as well as a gallery, two eateries, and two accommodations businesses.